Every edifice set apart to this use is another voice declaring to our minds and hearts that, though heaven and earth should pass away, the christian religion will survive. Whether a church be erected by the many, or the few; from the overflowings of opulence, or the hard-earned gatherings of need; whether it be the majestic cathedral, or the most simple Protestant structure; whether it be in honor of Trinity, or Unity; nay, though it were raised that Christ might be preached of envy and strife, we have in those walls a new witness to the immortal nature of true religion. They testify that interests are bound up in this cause, which will outlive all that change, and decay, and desolation can effect. They teach that this subject has a hold on the spirit of man so decided, and so firm, that neither life, nor death, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, shall disturb it.
